LONDON

Columbia in London

During this Fall semester program, learn from Columbia faculty whose work engages the city's literary culture and pursue your academic interests at the prestigious Queen Mary University of London (QMUL)!

Eligibility

- Must be a currently enrolled undergraduate student in good academic and disciplinary standing at Columbia University or Barnard College
- Minimum 3.0 cumulative GPA
- Students do not need to major in English and Comparative Literature, but they should demonstrate motivation to study the topic of the global seminar

Housing

QMUL provides on-campus accommodations that are self-catered apartments or flats.

Academics

In addition to the Columbia Global Seminar, you enroll in two or three QMUL courses.

QMUL offers a wide variety of coursework, including sciences, humanities, and social sciences.

Activities

Guided field trips and events offer deeper engagement outside of the classroom.

Columbia Global Seminar

A faculty member from Columbia's English and Comparative Literature department leads the program. That faculty member crafts and teaches a version of the program's Global Seminar, London as Literature, that draws upon their areas of expertise. The Global Seminar gives you the opportunity to study and contextualize literary texts in their immediate geographical and cultural settings.
